DART Flight Demonstrator completes design certification

The Demonstration for Autonomous Rendezvous Technology, or DART, has completed its design certification review for the Orbital Space Plane program — a NASA-wide initiative to develop a crew rescue and transfer vehicle to and from the International Space Station. DART is a flight demonstrator designed to test technologies required for a spacecraft to locate and rendezvous with other craft in space. The Marshall Center-managed project will provide the first-ever autonomous rendezvous capability for the U.S. space program.

Marshall Director David King's address on CAIB report will replay on Centerwide TV at 10:30 a.m. Friday and at bottom of each hour until 3:30 p.m.

All Marshall civil service and contractor employees are reminded to wear their badges at all times
